Overview

Achievement of Chartered Teacher Status requires candidates to undertake an introductory unit, successfully complete four units of assessment and a formal application. Some of these units consist of a single assessment, while others, such as the examinations, contain multiple assessments.

Recognition of Prior Certified Learning (RPCL) provides a means by which candidates may use previous relevant qualifications as credit towards achieving Chartered Teacher Status. Candidates may be exempted from part or all of one or more of the assessment units that must be completed to achieve the 100 chartership credits required to receive Chartered Teacher Status, up to a maximum of 30 chartership credits in total. These qualifications will typically have to have been completed no more than three years prior to candidates registering to start their Chartered Status journey.

RPCL can only be awarded for a maximum of 30 credits towards Chartered Status. If candidates have completed multiple qualifications that are listed as offering automatic RPCL towards different assessment units, they should choose which assessment unit they wish to be exempt from and request RPCL for the relevant qualification related to that assessment unit.

RPCL is only possible for learning which:

- can be evidenced and includes a formal, summative assessment element, typically where a certificate or other qualification has been awarded;
- has been completed no more than three years prior to when the candidate registers for Chartered Status (this principle ensures the currency of the prior learning for which recognition is being sought);
- is listed on the Chartered College of Teaching website as a qualification for which RPCL is offered.

We are not able to award Recognition of Prior Certificated Learning for any qualifications outside of those listed in this document or on our website

How to apply for Recognition of Prior Certificated Learning

Candidates who wish to utilise qualifications and other professional learning as credit toward Chartered Status assessments, will need to do the following;

1. Check that their qualification and/or professional learning is recognised for exemption by the Chartered College of Teaching (see p5-10);
2. Be a full member of the Chartered College of Teaching and registered as a Candidate for the Chartered Status pathway that is relevant for your role and responsibilities;
3. Email the Accreditation team at charteredteacher@chartered.college with details of the desired assessment(s) they would like exemption from and evidence to back up their claim. Evidence should include a formal certificate and where appropriate a transcript/statement.

Upon receipt of a request and suitable evidence, the Chartered College Accreditation Team will review the information provided and notify the candidate of the outcome of their request/next steps. The Chartered College of Teaching reserves the right to decline a request if any information is found to have been falsely supplied or alternatively request further information on a qualification, if initial information provided does not allow us to make a decision.

Upon successful application for RPCL;

- Candidate is notified of the outcome via email;
- Candidate record is updated to reflect exemption;
- RPCL remains valid for the duration of registration as a Chartered Status Candidate.

N.B. The Chartered College of Teaching reserves the right to change or amend this document at any time.

Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ's)

Q. What forms of evidence are currently being accepted for a RPCL request?

A formal certificate which states your name, qualification, awarding body and date. If you are providing evidence for mentoring within the Early Career Framework (e.g. ECF Mentoring) then you will be able to submit a letter/email confirmation from the Headteacher or senior leader with delegated responsibility from the headteacher.

Q. What qualifications are currently being accepted for RPCL?

You can find a list of all of the qualifications currently accepted for RPCL on pages 5-11 of this document

Q. I have purchased the assessment unit my qualification provides exemption for, can I get a refund?

Unfortunately we are unable to retrospectively approve exemption if you have already purchased an assessment unit. We are also unable to provide refunds.

Q. I have purchased a full chartered bundle but now have RPCL, can I get a refund?

Unfortunately we are unable to retrospectively approve exemption if you have already purchased an assessment unit or full chartered bundle. We are also unable to provide refunds.

Q. I have completed a masters/doctorate more than 5 years ago, can I not apply for RPCL?

You need to be awarded your Masters/Doctorates qualification from a UK or Irish University within the last five years. All of our other currently recognised qualifications for prior certificated learning need to have been awarded in the last three years.

Q. I have completed my qualification longer than the time stated in the conditions, can I not apply for RPCL?

Unfortunately we are not able to accept qualifications that were awarded beyond the timeframes stated in the table above.

Q. If I receive RPCL for an examination in the Professional Knowledge Award, will I receive a discount?

For candidates who are exempt from either a MCQ, Written or OSTE Examination in the Professional Knowledge Award, they will receive a £29 discount voucher from the total course cost. Candidates should not purchase the unit until RPCL has been confirmed by us.

Q: I have been awarded my qualification but have not yet received my formal certificate from my qualification provider, can I apply for RPCL?

Candidates will need to provide a copy of their formal certificate from their provider/awarding body for review in order to be awarded RPCL. You are welcome to contact us as soon as you receive your formal certificate so we can continue to process your application.

Q. Does Chartered Status provide postgraduate level credits?

As Chartered Status is a professional accreditation rather than a qualification, candidates would need to contact individual universities to enquire as to whether or not the assessment units would be recognised as credit towards a postgraduate qualification.
